

Group Discussions in class

Using discussions in classroom is a primary tool which stimulates critical thinking among students. It is a healthy way to make students active participants in the teaching learning process. A good rapport is build up with the students during discussions. It allows students to discuss any topic with their peers and express their views. It boosts their confidence. Discussions in classroom are not only beneficial for students 'social skills, but also their educational development and lifelong learning.

